Pearson's chi-squared test was used to determine the univariate association between each variable and the presence of diverticulosis.